The Council's annual Hackney in Bloom competition honours everyone who helps make the borough a brighter and more beautiful place to live.

Now in its tenth year, this year's competition categories ranged from 'best housing estate garden' to the 'young and green-fingered' award.

At the awards ceremony, special guest and celebrity landscaper Tommy Walsh said: "It was a great evening for gardening enthusiasts in the greenest borough of inner London, my home town, Hackney." For more info and pics see pages 4-5.

Adoption North London's adopters come from a huge range of backgrounds

Think about adoption

RESENTERS who want to find out more about adoption or fostering can attend two events to talk about the process.

Prospective parents or carers are invited to an informal coffee morning at the cafe in Clissold House, on 13 August, from 11am-1pm, to meet the Council's head of corporate parenting, Alison Bishop.

Then on 21 August an information evening at Stoke Newington Town Hall is set to take place from 5.30pm to 8pm.

Interested parties will be able to meet people who have already gone through the adoption process, as well as staff and social workers from Adoption North London – a group of six local authorities that work together to find homes for some of their most vulnerable children.

“ Adopting a child is life-changing – not just for the child being adopted but for the whole family ”

The information sessions will give would-be adopters the chance to ask questions on a one-to-one basis, as well as see a presentation about the adoption process.

Sally, 46, who adopted her daughter through Adoption North London, said: "Adopting a child is life-changing – not just for the child being adopted, but for the whole family. It's an emotional journey, and as a parent, one you will find rewarding and fun – even with its challenges."

There are lots of myths about who can and cannot adopt. Adoption North London works with people from a huge range of backgrounds; they can be gay, lesbian or straight, married, single or living together. Some own their own homes and others rent. The main requirement is that they have space in their home – and heart – to raise a child.

Many of the children waiting for a home have a black or mixed heritage background, and the Council is particularly keen to hear from people who could help these children develop their identity and explore their heritage.

Hackney has also been given the green light to allow people approved to adopt to search the national Adoption Register for the first time.

From September the Council will pilot the scheme, which will allow approved adopters to learn more about the children who are waiting for a loving, stable home.

News in brief

Consultation on management of Hackney Homes' properties

HACKNEY Homes' tenants and leaseholders are being asked for their views on the future management of their homes.

On 21 July, the Council's Cabinet agreed to consult on a proposal for the return of housing management functions to the local authority from April 2016.

Hackney Homes was set up in 2006 by the Council in order to access external investment to fund the Decent Homes programme of renovations to its housing stock. This work will be completed next year.

The Decent Homes programme has replaced windows in more than 16,000 properties and led to more than 6,000 kitchens and bathrooms being upgraded.

The current management agreement expires on 31 March 2016 and the Council and Hackney Homes board have agreed that now is the right time to review how services will be delivered in the future.

Independent researchers Ipsos MORI have been appointed to oversee the consultation and manage responses to a questionnaire which will be sent out to all Hackney Homes' tenants and leaseholders.

The consultation runs from 8 August until 31 October. For more information, call: 0808 141 3072; e-mail: hackney@ipsos.com; or visit: www.hackneyhomes.org.uk/consultation

Remember the fallen

THE sacrifices of servicemen and women in the First World War were remembered in Hackney on the eve of the centenary of the conflict.

Former members of the armed forces, civic dignitaries, faith leaders, schoolchildren and cadets were among those who paid moving tribute to those who served and died during the 1914-1918 conflict at a ceremony in Hackney Town Hall Square on 3 August.

A national day of remembrance was held on 4 August – the 100th anniversary of the start of a war in which 16million people, including 1million

“The First World War had a considerable impact on the lives of everyone”

Britons and Commonwealth citizens – lost their lives.

The first Zeppelin bomb of the war fell in the garden of the Nevill Arms pub, in Stoke Newington, on 30 May 1915.

The Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Sharon Patrick, said: “The service was very moving and brought home the terrible sacrifices made by so many, both on the frontline and at home.”

The Representative Deputy Lieutenant to the London Borough of Hackney, Lt Col Roderick Morris, read ‘Strange Meeting’, a poem by Wilfred Owen, as well as an excerpt from biblical passage, Micah 4.

He said: “There is no one alive today who was involved in the First World War. However, their children and their children’s children are still with us and therefore their sacrifice and suffering is still pertinent in a personal context.

“There is a shared history in communities in Hackney, Britain and its links to the Commonwealth. The war had a considerable impact on the lives of everyone.”

A centenary exhibition, ‘Writing Home: Letters to Hackney during the First World War,’ is currently showing at Hackney Museum. It features letters from the frontline by two young soldiers to their families and sweethearts back home in Hackney.

Hackney Archives, in Dalston CLR James Library, is also showing ‘Hackney Remembers WW1’, a display that explores how the war changed the lives of local people.

Have your say on plans to limit the number of betting shops in Hackney

RESIDENTS are being urged to respond to a consultation on legislation to limit the spread of betting shops.

The Government is asking if local people support moves to ensure gambling firms have to get planning permission before opening a betting shop. Under existing guidelines betting shops can open without planning permission in premises such as a bank or estate agent. They can also open without permission in pubs, restaurants, cafes and takeaways.

There are about 65 betting shops in Hackney, eight in Mare Street alone.

The Council has lobbied successive governments over the past seven years to give local authorities a greater say on betting shop applications. In February, it submitted a proposal to give betting shops their own planning classification, like nightclubs and casinos. This would mean gambling firms would have to apply for permission to open a new branch and residents could have a say. The submission received cross-party support across London boroughs.

Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, said: “This consultation represents a real victory for Hackney and local government and demonstrates what councils can achieve when they unite for a cause. As well as the Council submitting a consultation response, we are encouraging residents and organisations to make their voices heard too.”

THE borough has proven it packs some serious flower power after residents took home a cluster of prizes during the annual Hackney in Bloom competition.

The past year has seen green-fingered locals busy digging, planting, and growing fabulous pots, plots, gardens and borders.

The most popular category, best front garden, was won by Roli Ross whose manicured front garden-scape impressed judges from the Council's Streetscene team, while Brian Walker took gold in the best housing estate garden category.

St Joseph's Hospice's, a mini Garden of Eden, in Mare Street, picked up the best business premises award, while Lee House Rehabilitation and Employment Centre dug to victory as best community project.

Emma Holland proved that living in a flat was no barrier to growing for gold. Her beautiful balcony blooms were voted number one in the best container category.

Leading future generations of gardeners was Lauriston School, in Rutland Road, which won the best food growing award, and Benthal Primary School, in Benthal Road, which took gold in the young and green-fingered category.

The best newcomer award was jointly shared by Ann Brooks and Nina Weissman.

Special guest and celebrity landscaper Tommy Walsh gave the nominees gardening tips at the awards ceremony held at Hackney Marshes Centre, in Homerton Road, on 31 July.

Rebecca Shahoud and Neve Hamilton-Downs, 15, try out the diving facilities at Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park; Tom Daley (top right) now trains at the pool

Diving in at the deep end

By Rebecca Shahoud

It is no wonder the London Aquatics Centre in Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park is up against the Shard for the UK's most prestigious architectural award, the RIBA Stirling Prize.

The deconstructivist structure by architect Zaha Hadid was designed in 2004, before London won the bid for the 2012 Olympic Games. Its vast stingray wings hover over the Waterworks River with the ArcelorMittal Orbit looming in the background. It cuts a clean, clear presence in the new East London skyline.

Since it opened to the public in March this year, there have been over 200,000 visitors to the centre, run by leisure operators Better.

Olympic bronze medallist Tom Daley, who recently moved from Plymouth to be close to the arena in which he won his Olympic bronze medal, is a regular. He has also lent his support to a learn to dive programme – The Tom Daley Diving Academy – which delivers a range of training for all levels and ages.

I tried out an adult beginners session with Neve Hamilton-Downs, 15. We were coached by Jodie Ellis, a former national diver who became an instructor eight years ago.

“The centre uses a UV water filtration system with a minimal amount of chlorine, making it easier to swim without goggles”

She led us to the dry diving facilities, with trampolines, tumble tracks and springboards – with a fulcrum mechanism which adjusts the bounciness of the springboard – to practise.

I tried out my jumping skills on a springboard hovering above a nine metre pit full of sponge bricks, which was more difficult to get out of than fall into, then hit the trampolines, before being introduced to the diving pool.

The centre uses a UV water filtration system with a minimal amount of chlorine, making it easier to swim without goggles. There are three pools in total: a diving pool, 50-metre competition pool and training pool. This is where families come to learn to swim. An adult swim in the Olympic pool starts from just £3.50 and a diving lesson from £5.

The diving pool – at five metres deep – is the deepest level set for competitions.

The bottom of the diving pool has a movable floor so the depth can be adjusted.

There are a number of springboards and diving platforms, from one metre up to the 10-metre platform. I had never dived properly before, so in this taster session Jodie taught me the correct way to dive from the side of the pool before introducing me to the lower platforms.

At first, I struggled with the height of the three-metre springboard, and, on all fours, held on to the sides glued with fear. Thanks to Jodie's gentle encouragement my courage returned enough to investigate the view from the 10-metre platform.

From the top, I could see the enormity of the arena, which can seat 2,500 people. During the Olympic Games it seated 17,500 people because it had spectator wings fixed to the sides of the building.

A number of diving and swimming events have been held here since 2012, including the FINA/NVC Diving World Series in April.

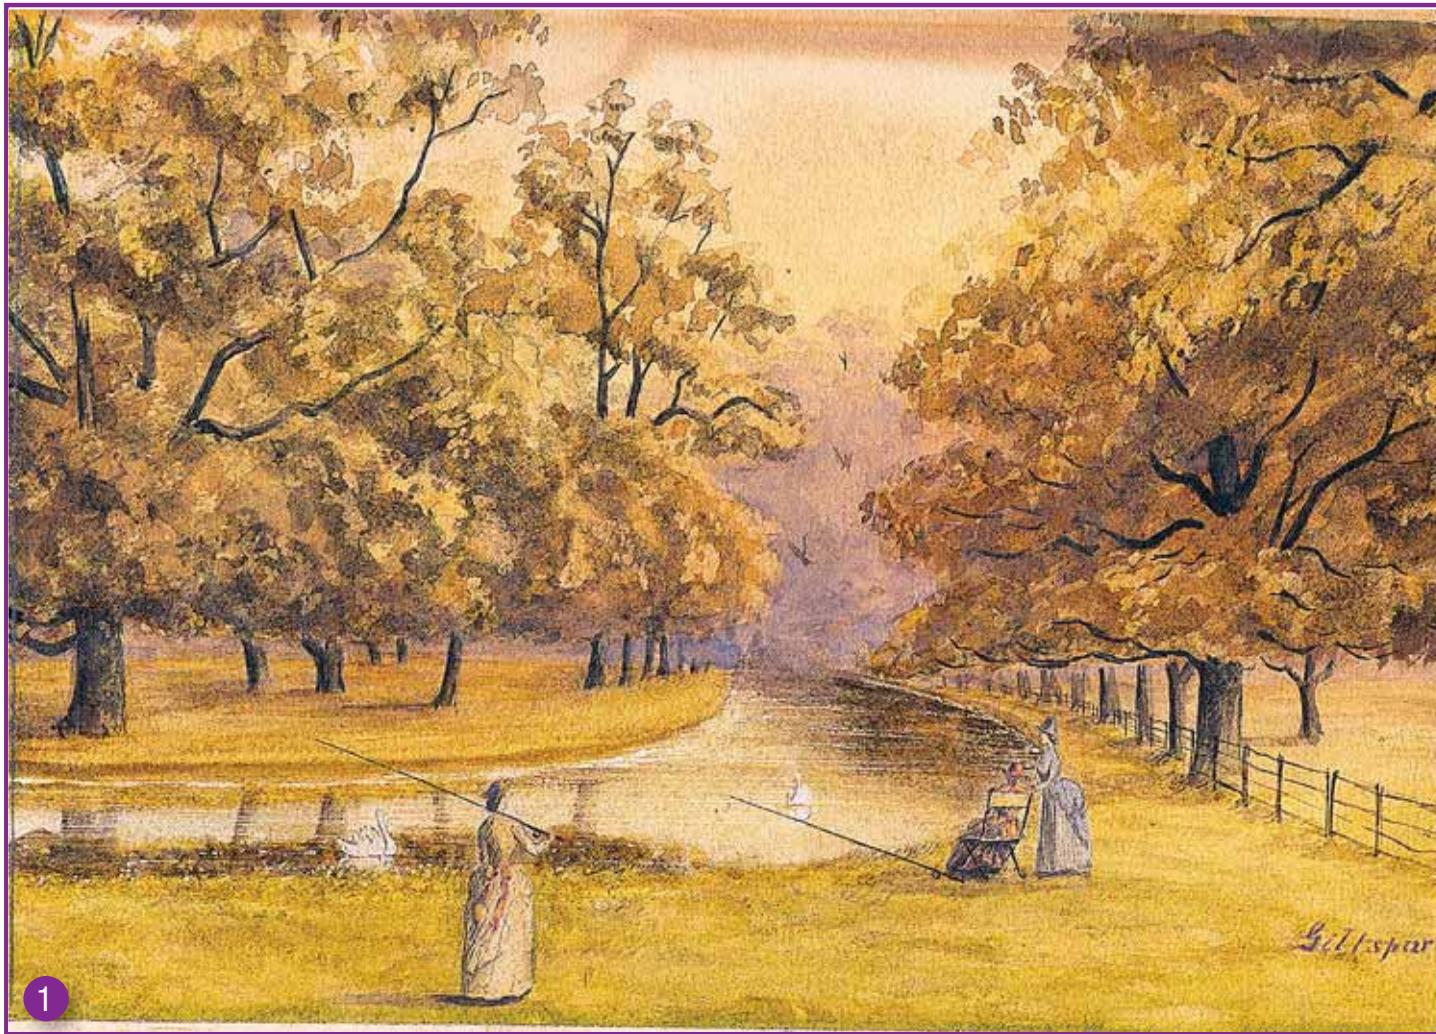

I learnt to dive in just one lesson with Jodie. It was easier than I thought and left me wanting more. And for the prices, there is no excuse not to go back.

Clissold's birthday

Re-staged photos and restored fountain unveiled to celebrate Clissold Park's 125th anniversary

THE 125th anniversary of Clissold Park was marked on 24 July by the re-staging of photographs taken in the late 19th and early 20th centuries.

One image, a Victorian snapshot, captures jubilant visitors celebrating the park's official opening in 1889, which followed a dogged crusade by campaigners to save the Stoke Newington treasure from the clutches of developers.

The other photo, from an early 20th century postcard, depicts three boys enjoying

Grade II listed Clissold House after its restoration the park's Memorial Drinking Fountain, which commemorates John Runtz and Joseph Beck, the park's founding fathers.

The pictures were reproduced by Clissold Park User Group last month to honour 125 years of one of Hackney's best-loved – and most visited – green spaces.

The granite fountain, which was restored by the Council with help from the Drinking Fountain Association and Clissold Park User Group, was unveiled on the day by Joseph Beck's great great great grandchildren.

Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: "Clissold Park has an incredibly rich and interesting history, including its salvation by people-power at the end of the 19th century.

photo recreations."

More than £9million has been invested over the past four years in restoring the park and the Grade II listed Clissold House, named after Augustus Clissold – who married the estate's heiress, back to their former glory through joint funding by the Council and the Heritage Lottery Fund.

The park currently offers a range of services, including tennis courts, a skate park, children's play area, learning pavilion, animal enclosures, organic food-growing area, paddling pool and cafe. A new tennis clubhouse will open later this year.

Function rooms in the refurbished Clissold House are available for hire and regularly host weddings, parties and meetings.

The Council also holds regular, free activities, including fitness classes, orienteering, butterfly dome tours, and lessons on Clissold's night-time world.

Clissold Park Fact Box

- Clissold House was built in the 1790s for Jonathan Hoare, the son of a prominent Quaker slavery abolitionist, Samuel Hoare
- The ornamental canal in the park was once part of the New River, which supplied the growing City of London with fresh drinking water from 1613
- The park was bought for the public by the Metropolitan Board of Works at a cost of £96,000 – more than £4.5million in today's money
- When it was handed over to the public, there were unsuccessful attempts to rename it Royal Albert Park.

Street artist John Dolan with his dog George, at the Howard Griffin Gallery, Shoreditch High Street, where his artwork is currently being exhibited

Man's best friend

JOHN Dolan's artwork sells for thousands of pounds and he has just published his autobiography, 'John & George: The Dog Who Changed My Life'.

He is heading to Los Angeles in a few months' time for his first show abroad, and is also set to draw a series of portraits of rock stars with their dogs to raise money for Battersea Dogs and Cats Home.

Yet John can still be found sat on the pavement in Shoreditch High Street with pen in hand, sketching buildings, people, and of course, his dog George.

A former heroin addict and petty criminal, John spent many years both behind bars and sleeping rough. Low self-esteem, drug addiction and physical and mental health problems left him largely unemployable.

So, he started begging for money with George. He says: "I was bored out of my head, sitting on Shoreditch High Street waiting for people to fill my cup up with money, so I thought, 'instead of waiting, why not sit here and draw? Even when it was raining and snowing, I sat there, trying to draw."

John's detailed pen drawings depict life in the East End. It is street art in the literal sense: the illustrations are drawn from the pavement.

He sketched the buildings of 187 and 189 Shoreditch High Street, in particular, over and over again, improving every time.

He says: "The landscape was moving and evolving

“I was bored out of my head, sitting on Shoreditch High Street... so I thought, 'instead of waiting, why not draw?'”

day by day. I'd watch the area developing before my eyes into a huge hub for street art and culture. The environment and the vibe inspired me."

It was only a couple of months before his drawings started gaining interest. John's big break happened when he was approached by art enthusiasts Steven Moffett and Steven Dray who commissioned John to draw some pictures which featured in one-off art book, 'Shoreditch Unbound'. The book was launched in Hoxton in 2011.

John says: "Up until that point, I was asking myself, 'what is my purpose in life?' When I was given the book I saw my name alongside Tracey Emin and Gilbert and George, all these creative types. And that spurred me on."

A year later, John met with gallery owner Richard Howard-Griffin, who wanted him to collaborate with nearly 60 street artists including Stik, Malarky, Pablo Delgado, RUN and Cityzen Kane.

The street art exhibition, 'George the Dog, John the Artist', opened in Shoreditch High Street – the focus of so many of John's drawings – in 2013. It proved to be a monumental success, attracting a wealth of interest from press and buyers. In fact, everything sold out on the first night.

Since then, John has been more and more in demand: he currently has another exhibition on at the Howard Griffin Gallery. But he thanks the passers-by in Shoreditch who helped lift him out of destitution.

He regularly donates to UNICEF and the Big Issue Foundation, and has provided artwork for a Centrepoint charity auction.

He says: "People have been helping me get by. I received a lot of charity and I want to give something back to society."

Flying the green flag

HACKNEY has achieved its highest ever number of Green Flags, after being awarded 17 in total.

Albion Square and Aske Gardens received the top award for parks for the first time this year, joining the 15 other Hackney green spaces which have kept their coveted Green Flag status.

The prestigious awards, run by Keep Britain Tidy, indicate that a public space boasts the highest possible standards, is well maintained and has good facilities.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and

Money raised from Islamic Relief textile recycling banks funds projects worldwide

EVERY year residents put thousands of items of clothing, shoes and textiles into charity collection banks managed by Traid and Islamic Relief.

Unwanted clothing donated to Islamic Relief is used to generate funds for a variety of humanitarian projects across the globe, including in Yemen, where the scarcity of water is an issue. Mohammed Saleh, who lives in the Bani Matar district of Sana'a in Yemen, says: “We bring water from a distance of seven kilometres on donkeys. Mostly girls do not go to school because their families ask them to collect water.”

Islamic Relief is transforming the futures of families like Mohammed’s by funding an innovative project that will benefit and empower six vulnerable communities by capturing and storing rainwater.

New ponds and channels will be constructed and roads improved, which will give people better access to healthcare.

Cllr Feryal Demirci,

Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: “Around 350,000 tonnes of clothing, worth about £140million, goes to landfill in the UK every year. Not only does using our textile banks divert usable clothing away from the waste stream, the money raised by the charities can change people’s lives.”

Holes

Arcola Tent, 2 Ashwin Street, E8 3DL

THREE conference organisers and a teenage girl are stranded on a desert island following a plane crash that wipes out their fellow passengers.

A glib conversation about the availability of mini-spirits in the wreckage, and the potential use of a plastic bucket and spade from a child's luggage to dig a grave for the dead, is cut short by the girl's entreaty that her parents be buried separately.

Tragedy doesn't quite sum up the tone of Tom Basden's 'Holes' – instead the play strikes an unsettling balance between the bleak, the mundane and the ludicrous.

On a stifling summer's evening, the Arcola Tent is an appropriate arena for a desert island; from the moment undimmed lights blaze down on a round sandpit stage, strewn with upended luggage, Philip Breen's production cuts its audience no slack – it has them doubled up with laughter, then abruptly silenced by the macabre reality of untimely death.

Daniel Rigby is the single-minded Ian, a cross between Marlon Brando and Tarzan, who doggedly vouches to populate the island with wooden huts that'll be 'more like chalets' and, subsequently, his (and no one else's) children. Meanwhile his antithesis, a lanky Gus (Matthew Baynton), gulps down the contents of the minibar. The antipathy between the men is matched only by the jealousy of one woman for the other. Marie (Elizabeth Berrington), a frustrated HR manager, natters about holidays and house prices; and admires the designer heels she's salvaged. The teenage Erin (Sharon Singh) is the young rival in Marie's failed conquest of Gus. In a noisy clash of character and opinions, naïve Erin is the sole voice of reason. But even Erin is eventually dragged into the adult fray – she too is forced to play her part in a play that can be summarised as 'Lord of the Flies' for grown-ups. By Victoria Walvis

Stormont House special school, in Downs Park Road, is set to open a new sixth form in September

New sixth form

A NEW sixth form for young people with special educational needs (SEN) is set to open its doors from September.

The centre at Stormont House special school, in Downs Park Road, E8, will provide 20 places, giving students the chance to continue their studies in a supportive environment, and preparing them for the world of work.

The school has joined forces with Hackney Community College, City and Islington College, Hackney City Farm, Building Lives Academy, and The Hair Project to come up with a study programme which focuses on vocational qualifications.

“A new sixth form... will raise the bar on how to equip students with SEN to succeed as confident young adults”

Students will spend some of the week at these external colleges, attending Stormont House to work on core subjects including English, maths, personal and social development and other work-related learning.

Stormont House is a special school for pupils of secondary age who have a range of learning difficulties, including moderate learning difficulties, speech, language and communication needs, and autistic spectrum disorders. It recently received its third ‘outstanding’ Ofsted report in a row and moved into a new building in January, which was rebuilt through the Council’s Building Schools for the Future programme.

Headteacher Kevin McDonnell said: “This is an incredibly exciting time for the school; a brand new building, an Ofsted hat-trick, and now a sixth form that will raise the bar on how to equip students with SEN to succeed as confident, skilled and employable young adults.”

From September, all young people will be required by law to remain in education, training or employment until the age of 18. The new sixth form will make it easier for pupils to access the right sort of education for them.

SEN update

MAJOR national changes to the way children with special education needs (SEN) are supported, are due to come into force on 1 September. To help families prepare, Hackney Today will feature information about services every month.

New SEND reforms to come into force from 1 September

HACKNEY Parent Partnership is open during the summer break to provide parents and carers with information and advice in preparation for the special educational needs and disabilities (SEND) reforms which come into force from 1 September.

The partnership is based on the ground floor of the Hackney Ark, Downs Park Road, E8 2FP. The team is available from 9am to 5pm, Monday to Friday. To ask a question or book an appointment, call: 020 7014 7123. Staff from Hackney Learning Trust will also be on hand at the annual Secondary Schools Fair to answer questions about the SEND reforms. The event will take place at Hackney Town Hall, on 9 September, from 4pm to 7.30pm. The fair gives parents of children due to start secondary school next year the chance to speak to representatives of all of the borough’s secondary schools. Visitors will also be able to speak to staff and representatives from Hackney Independent Forum for Parents and Carers of Children with Disabilities.

Hackney University Technical College is set to close in August next year

HACKNEY University Technical College (HUTC) is set to close in August next year.

The move comes after low numbers of young people applied for places at the Hoxton college. It will not accept any new students this September, but all current year 10 pupils will stay on to complete their GCSEs next year. The current year 11s will be given the opportunity to continue their education into year 12 and 13 at neighbouring Hackney Community College (HCC). Students will also be given advice by the Hackney Learning Trust on other sixth form options.

Cllr Anntoinette Bramble, Cabinet Member for Children’s Services, said: “We have been working with all our partners to ensure that current pupils will be able to complete their exams with minimal disruption. We will be supporting them throughout the next year, as well as working with pupils who were intending to attend HUTC to find suitable provision elsewhere.”

The future of the HUTC buildings, at the HCC site, are under review by the college and the Department for Education to find a suitable education use.

Almost 400 young people took part in Young Hackney's survey, with 85 per cent rating it good, very good or excellent

Youth service approval

YOUNG people have given Hackney's youth service a glowing endorsement, with nearly 85 per cent rating it good, very good or excellent.

Almost 400 young people took part in the survey, which asked for their thoughts on activities in the borough. The survey was carried out in schools and at voluntary sector and Council-run youth centres.

Young people were particularly enthusiastic about youth centre staff, with nearly 95 per cent rating them four or five out of five for friendliness, and 91.3 per cent for knowledge.

“A lot of work has gone into youth clubs and... young people are responding positively”

The results follow the full roll-out of targeted sessions, projects and activities for young people at Hackney's five youth hubs. These include climbing, sports, arts and multimedia, cycle maintenance and cookery.

Most of the sessions are free, and most centres are open until 8.30pm during the week, with daytime activities at the weekend.

The centres' trained staff also run sessions to help young people who may be having problems at home, or are dealing with other difficulties in their lives.

The Council's five youth hubs in Dalston, Stoke Newington, Stamford Hill and Woodberry Down were built or rebuilt with input from Hackney Youth Parliament. One member, Ife Grillo, 16, said: "A lot of work has gone into youth clubs and I'm delighted to see young people are responding positively. I have to thank all the youth workers for how tirelessly they work and for helping improve the lives of young people in Hackney.

"It's important that we have surveys like this; if something affects young people, I feel they have a right to help influence and shape it."

Results from the survey will be put to newly-elected members of the youth parliament after voting takes place in October.

Awards for young footballers in Hackney Marshes Saturday Youth Football League

HUNDREDS of young footballers have been recognised for their commitment to the beautiful game in a presentation ceremony.

The Hackney Marshes Saturday Youth Football League sees around 300 youngsters from 13 clubs take part in training and matches every weekend.

All the players involved received medals, and the most successful teams picked up trophies.

Ahmet Ayden, 18, said: "I joined Salaam Peace in 2011 and began playing for the under-16s and then the under-21s team in the Hackney Marshes League.

"This last season, I was manager for the Salaam

Peace under-10s team. This has allowed me to share my knowledge with the younger generation who too have benefited from playing in a league."

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, added: "The league demonstrates the borough's commitment to giving many local clubs, children and young people the opportunity to take part in the beautiful game, and to get into shape and stay healthy in the process."

The league, set up by the Council and sponsored by Hackney Homes, also offers club development workshops for coaches and officials. Those interested in joining the league for the 2014/15 season, should e-mail: michael.cole@hackney.gov.uk

News in brief

Young people celebrate the Geffrye Museum's centenary

THIS year the Geffrye is celebrating the tri-centenary of the opening of almshouses for London's poor and elderly, and the centenary of their conversion into a museum.

Over the past 18 months, members of the Geffrye's youth programmes, in partnership with local youth organisations, have been exploring and re-interpreting the museum's historical buildings to create an exhibition in its front gardens.

It features large-scale animal sculptures, photographs, an audio tour, and events to celebrate the hidden stories of the almshouses, their inhabitants, the museum and its relationship with the local area over the past 300 years. The museum is also holding a free, celebratory family fun day on 17 August, programmed by young people. Visitors can drum and dance along to music inspired by the museum, enjoy vintage garden games played by almshouse children in the 1800s, and decorate animal masks. There is also an opportunity to join the museum's Young Volunteer Guides and explore behind the scenes in the almshouses and gardens. As well as the chance for young people, aged 11 to 24, to learn digital media skills and create otherworldly portraits inspired by the 1800s toy 'Monstrosity Scope'.

The free exhibition closes in January. For more info, visit: www.geffrye-museum.org.uk

Plans to introduce plain packaging for cigarettes

An example of standardised tobacco packaging, which would be 'highly likely to reduce the rate of children taking up smoking'

THE Council is supporting plans to introduce plain packaging for cigarettes, as part of ongoing efforts to reduce the number of residents who smoke.

It is believed that standardised packaging would make tobacco products less attractive, in particular to children and young people, by ensuring all brands look alike.

The Council submitted evidence to a Department of Health consultation after an independent review found that standardised packaging would be 'highly likely to reduce the rate of children taking up smoking'.

Hackney has one of the highest rates of adult smokers in the country: 22.6 per cent, compared to 19.5 per cent nationally.

Hackney also has a very young population and it is estimated that 1,000 children, aged between 11 and 15, may start smoking each year. A survey of young people in Hackney found that 43 per cent of those who smoked said they would be unlikely to continue to buy cigarettes if they were sold in standardised packaging with health warnings displayed. The same percentage said they wish they had never started smoking.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and

Culture, said: "Smoking is the biggest killer in Hackney and preventing children from taking it up is vital. Introducing standardised packaging is an opportunity to reduce the attractiveness of smoking."

Hackney unites to stop female genital mutilation (FGM) in the community

COMMUNITY groups in Hackney have come together to try and put an end to the practice of female genital mutilation (FGM).

They are working with the Council and partners to increase awareness of the issue, provide support for women who have been affected, and better protect girls at risk of FGM.

The term refers to all procedures that involve partial or total removal of the external parts of a woman's genital organs or other injury to the female genital organs for non-medical reasons.

The procedure, also known as 'cutting', is often carried out without anaesthetic, and to young girls aged under 15.

Most of these women and girls are thought to have migrated to the UK from countries where the practice of FGM is carried out.

It is illegal for anyone to perform FGM in this country and for UK nationals to perform or assist with FGM carried out abroad.

In Hackney, figures suggest that more than one in 20 women who give birth at Homerton hospital have undergone FGM.

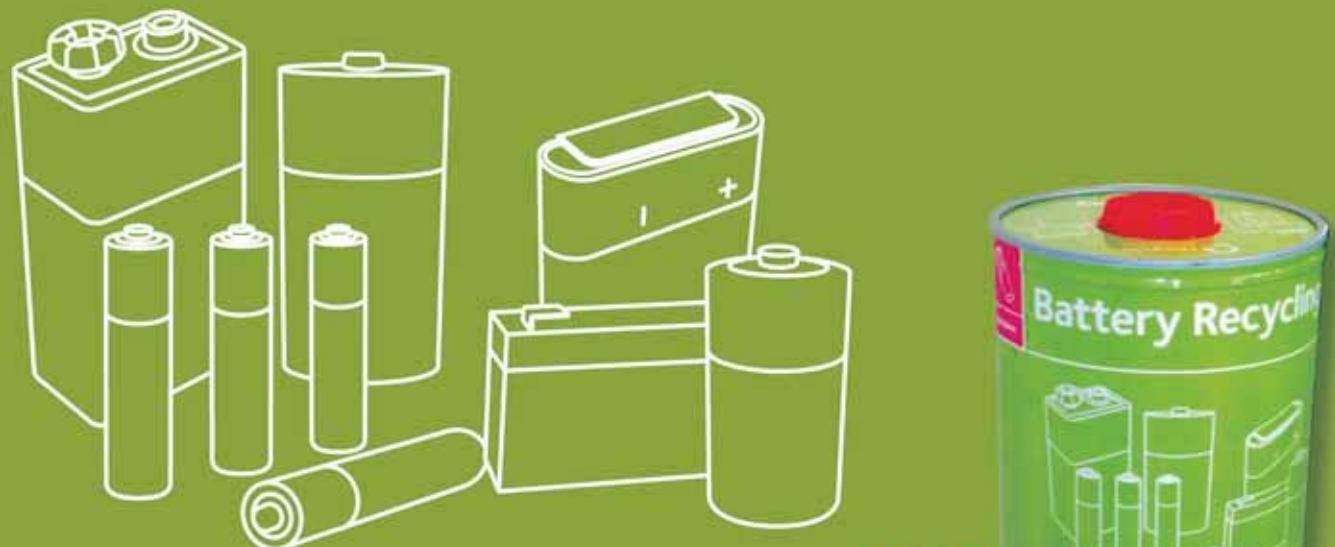

FGM campaigner and resident Hawa Sesay, who was cut in Sierra Leone when she was 13, has spoken out against the practice. At a recent FGM awareness meeting held by the Hackney Council for Voluntary Services, she said: "FGM is everyone's business and everyone's responsibility to end it. We must change our mindsets and make our own traditions. The more we stand against it, the sooner we will abolish it."

The Council is seeking views from anyone affected by FGM on what services are needed in the borough. To respond, visit: bit.ly/fgmsurvey. For more info call Hackney's social care team on: 020 8356 5500, or to speak to someone anonymously, contact the NSPCC's FGM helpline on: 0800 028 3550.

Bridging the gap

1. Alfred Terrace, gas works and the entrance to Haggerston Basin, watercolour by T. Van Thijsschilde, 1969 (painted from memories of c1930); 2. New North Road canal bridge today; 3. OS map extract 1894 Haggerston Basin; 4. Views of the bridge from the canal, 1973

CROSSING over the Regent's Canal in New North Road takes seconds and the bridge itself, 100 years old and now sprayed with unattractive grey Gunite as reinforcement, does little to catch the attention.

It is, however, a significant piece of civil engineering history as it was the first reinforced concrete tramway bridge to be built in England, and is now the oldest surviving ferro-concrete bridge in London.

The use of mass concrete to build large structures was pioneered by Scottish engineer Sir Robert McAlpine in the late 1800s. The technique of strengthening it with steel or iron developed by Frenchman Fran<sup>c</sup>oise Hennebique was then introduced into Britain by his fellow countryman Louise Gustave Mouchel at the turn of the century.

The strength and versatility offered by the revolutionary ferro-concrete system allowed the material to be moulded into huge single constructions instead of individual elements such as beams and columns.

The first use of ferro-concrete in Britain was the now demolished Weaver Building of 1897 at Swansea Docks, near Briton Ferry, where Mouchel had settled and founded what was to become one of the country's largest engineering consultancies. It was L G Mouchel & Partners that was asked in 1912 to design the ferro-concrete bridge spanning New North Road.

Although it was the first tramway crossing in London to be built from the material, it was not the first bridge. That was also in Shoreditch and crossed the Haggerston Basin off the Regent's Canal in Whiston Road.

“Shoreditch should be proud of having given the lead to London in the construction of the ferro-concrete bridge”

The new bridge cost only £424 and was reported in the Evening News of 25 April, 1911 as being London's cheapest bridge. When it was completed a 10-ton steamroller carrying two tons of lead ran backwards and forwards over the bridge to test its strength, resulting in a deflection of only 0.397mm.

It was claimed that the Whiston Road bridge would last for many centuries and need nothing spending on it for repairs. However, the bridge was demolished in the 1950s when the disused Haggerston Basin was filled in as part of the creation of over the canal than the old brick one had done. It was also seven metres wider and designed to allow for two lanes of tramways.

At the opening ceremony of the New North Road bridge in July 1914, a councillor stated that 'Shoreditch should be proud of having given the lead to London in the construction of the ferro-concrete bridge'.

A century later the trams have gone, but the bridge still stands up to today's heavy traffic and is testimony to the strengths both of Hennebique's system and Mouchel's design.

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections took place in May 2014.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see. Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

Hackney has an executive Mayor, Jules Pipe, who is not a councillor, but is directly elected by the entire borough. The Mayor is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney who is elected annually from among the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Sharon Patrick.

Raw courgette noodles

Serves 2

Preparation time

30 mins

Cooking time

THIS recipe for raw courgette noodles comes from The Russet, 17 Amhurst Terrace, E8. Top tip: use a vegetable spiraliser, or a julienne peeler, to create strips of courgette.

Ingredients

- 20g walnuts
- 100g peas
- Jug of iced water
- Fresh mint, handful
- Olive oil
- 2 courgettes, 1 green and 1 yellow, if possible
- Pea shoots, handful
- Courgette and marigold flowers, if you can get them.

waiting for the water to come back to the boil, removing the peas and then quickly cooling them down by pouring iced water on them. This method of cooking keeps the peas looking extra green and preserves the vitamins

- Blend the peas with the mint and a good glug of olive oil. This is your pesto
- Spiralise the courgettes, or use a peeler to shave off thin strips. You are aiming for the longest, thinnest strips of courgette possible. Mix the courgette strips with the pesto in a bowl, making sure that the courgette becomes well coated, and season with salt and pepper

- Gently crush the walnuts into small crumb-sized pieces. Place the dressed nest of noodles onto a plate. Sprinkle the crushed walnuts over the top of the dish and garnish with the pea shoots and courgette and marigold flowers.

Method

- Toast the walnuts in a dry pan over a medium heat for 3-4 minutes. This brings out the sweet nuttiness and adds toasty aromas
- Blanch and shock the peas. This means putting them into a pan of salted boiling water,

The Russet is tucked away off Hackney Downs Park in an ex-industrial printworks. Elegantly decorated in a rustic, upcycled style, it serves big breakfasts, lunches and tapas at night. An eclectic events programme includes live music, cinema, cabaret, theatre, film discussions, art exhibitions and workshops.

Have your say on Hackney's ambitious ten-year travel plan

RESIDENTS can help shape the future of transport and travel in Hackney by taking part in a Council survey.

Proposals in the draft Hackney Transport Strategy 2014-2024 include improving life for pedestrians in the borough's town centres, building on Hackney's cycling policy, and securing better public transport.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "This document is an incredible, innovative and ambitious plan for the future of Hackney."

"It outlines what the Council hopes to achieve in the next 10 years in terms of how residents get around the borough and the impact that has on people's lives and the environment.

"It confronts a range of problems facing Hackney at the moment and what is likely to cause issues in the future, from the rapidly-growing population to the rapidly-growing waistlines of the borough's children.

"But it also seeks to build on positives the Council has achieved, including improved walking rates, as well as Hackney's position as London's foremost cycling borough."

Other areas being consulted upon include: improving the safety of Hackney's streets, public places and roads; increasing tree-planting; reducing vehicle emissions; and increasing access to jobs. The Council's vision is to 'lead the way in London transport provision and create a fair, equitable, safe and responsive system by 2024'.

Anyone interested in giving their views can complete a questionnaire online at: consultation.hackney.gov.uk; or e-mail comments to: movegreener@hackney.gov.uk. All responses must be received by 5pm on Friday, 24 October.
